

Why is correct usage of medicines important?

- Animal health – if you need to treat a sick animal, you want the treatment to be effective and safe
- Human health – inappropriate use of medicines can be a risk to you, to your colleagues and to the treatment of sick people
- Economics – ineffective or unnecessary treatment is like throwing money away
- Compliance – farm assurance programmes increasingly require farm workers to have evidence of medicines training – attendees will receive a certificate which satisfies the latest Red Tractor recommendations

We offer training courses where we will come to your farm and ensure that all staff are trained how to use medicines appropriately and effectively. The course covers use of decision trees to aid diagnosis, administration, storage, dosage, disposal and observation of withdrawal periods. It usually generates a good productive discussion with farm staff.